THE Prologue opens in the nebulous regions of space, in which float the invisible legions of angels, Cherubs and seraphs, that, uniting with the celestial trumpets, lift their voices in a hymn of praise to the Supreme ruler of the universe. Mefistofele enters on the scene at the close of the anthem, and standing erect amid the clouds, with his feet upon the border of his cloak, mockingly addresses the Deity. In answer to the question from the Mystic Choir, "Knowest thou Faust?" he answers contemptuously, and offers a wager that he will entice him to evil, and thus gain a victory over the powers of Good. The wager is accepted, and the Spirits resume their chorus of praise.

ACT I.—The drama opens on Easter Sunday, at Frankfort-on-the-main. Crowds of people of all conditions move in and out the City gates. Among them appears a grey Friar, an object of both reverence and dread to those near him. The aged Dr. Faust and his pupil Wagner descend from a height and enter upon the scene, followed by the Friar, whose movements they discuss. Faust returns to his laboratory, still followed by the friar, who unheeded, enters with him, and conceals himself in an alcove. Faust gives himself to meditation, and upon opening the sacred volume, is startled by a shriek from the friar as he rushes from his place of concealment. Faust makes the all-potent "sign of Solomon," when Mefistofeles throws off his disguise,—and in his own person appears in the garb of a knight, with a black cloak upon his arm. In reply to Faust's questionings, he declares himself the spirit that denieth all things, desiring only the complete ruin of the world, and a return to chaos and night. He offers to make Faust the companion of his wanderings, upon certain conditions, to which the latter agrees, saying: "If thou wilt bring me one hour of peace, in which my soul may rest—if thou wilt unveil the world and myself before me—if I may find cause to say to some flying moment, 'Stay, for thou art blissful,' then let me die, and let Hell's depths engulf me." The contract completed, Mefistofele spreads his cloak; and both disappear through the air.

ACT II. opens with the garden scene. Faust (rejuvenated, and under the name of Henry,) Margaret, Mefistofele and Martha stroll here and there in couples, chatting and love-making. Thence Mefistofele takes Faust to the heights of the Brocken, where he witnesses the orgies of the Witches' Sabbath. The Fiend is welcomed and saluted as their King. Faust, benumbed and stupified, gazes into the murky sky, and beholds there a vision of Margaret, pale, sad, and fettered with chains.

ACT III.—The scene is a prison. Margaret lies extended upon a heap of straw, mentally wandering, and singing to herself;

Mef. and Faust appears outside the grating. They converse hurriedly, and Faust begs for the life of Margaret. Mefistofele promises to do what he can, and bids him haste, for the infernal steeds are ready for flight. He opens the cell, and Faust enters it. Margaret think the jailors have come to release her, but at length recognizes her lover. She describes what followed his desertion of her, and begs him to lay her in death beside her loved ones. Faust entreats her to fly with him, and she finally consents, saying, that in some far distant isle they may yet be happy. The voice of Mefistofele in the background recalls her to the reality of the situation. She shrinks away from Faust, prays to Heaven for mercy, and dies, while the voices of the celestial choir are heard singing softly "She's saved!" Faust and Mefistofele escape, as the executioner and his escort appear in the background.

In Act IV, Mefistofele takes Faust to the shores of the Peneus, in the vale of Tempe, when they agree to separate for a while, each seeking his fortune on a different path. Faust is ravished with the beauty of the scene, while Mefistofele finds that the orgies of the Brocken were more to his taste.

'Tis the night of the classic Sabbath. A band of young maidens appear, singing and dancing. Mefistofele, annoyed and confused, retires. Helen enters with Chorus, and absorbed by a terrible vision, rehearses the story of Troy's destruction. Faust enters, richly clad in the costume of a knight of the fifteenth century, followed by Mefistofele, Nereus, Pantalís, and others, with little fauns and sirens, and kneeling before Helen, addresses her as his ideal of beauty and purity. Thus pledging to each other their love and devotion, they wander through the bowers and are lost to sight.

In the Epilogue, we find Faust in his laboratory once more—an old man, with death fast approaching, mourning over his past life, with the holy volume open before him. Fearing that Faust may yet escape him, Mefistofele spreads his cloak, and urges Faust to fly with him through the air. Appealing to Heaven, Faust is strengthened by the sound of angelic songs, and resists. Foiled in his effort, Mefistofele conjures up a vision of beautiful sirens. Faust hesitates a moment, flies to the sacred volume, and cries, "Here at last I find salvation." Then falling on his knees in prayer, effectually overcomes the temptations of the Evil one. He then dies amid a shower of rose-leaves, and to the triumphant song of a celestial choir. Mefistofele has lost his wager, and holy influences have prevailed.

NOTES.

PROLOGUE.—Mephistophilis, wrote Marlowe in his "Doctor Faustus"; Mephostophilus, wrote Shakespeare in his "Merry Wives of Windsor"; Mephostofiles, wrote Widman in his legend of "Faust". Mephisto and Mephistophila are often found in the "Complaints" and ballads and romances of the sixteenth century. John Pfitzer, in 1729, established the actual "Mephostopheles," which was afterwards adapted by Goethe, Lenau, and others.

Duntzer, in his "Faustsage," gives this name a Greek derivation, from "mephostophilos," an enemy of light.

ACT I.—We know that Goethe has here introduced a "water-dog" instead of a "grey friar," but, on the other hand, in the old legends and descriptions of Faust we find the Grey Friar. We have followed the legendary tradition. (W. Widman, "Life of Faust").

ACT II.—"Sabot bar Sabbath?" Les initiés chantaient "Sabot et les sorcières au Sabbat criaient à tue-tête "bar Sabbath!" (See Le Loyer, "Des Spectres," 1, vil, c. 3.)

ACT IV.—The Fourth Act and the epilogue of the present Opera are taken from Goethe's "Second Faust," which is the continuation and necessary complement of the first. Without this continuation, the drama remains imperfect in its highly moral scope and development. A bargain is the starting point of Goethe's poem; if the action ceases at Margaret's death, the bargain has never been fulfilled, nor the scheme of the drama properly evolved.

The struggle must therefore be prolonged until the death of Faust, who is the subject of the bargain.

The musical score is arranged in two systems. The first system contains vocal staves and piano accompaniment. The vocal staves have lyrics 'Ah!' and 'Ah!' with dotted lines indicating sustained notes. The piano accompaniment includes triplets in the right hand and chords in the left hand. The second system continues the piano accompaniment with a series of chords in the right hand and a single note in the left hand, marked with a bell icon and the text '(Bells.)'. The score is written in a key with one flat (B-flat) and a common time signature (C).

The musical score is written for a vocal ensemble and piano. The vocal parts (Soprano, Alto, Tenor, Bass) and the piano part are arranged in staves. The score includes lyrics in Italian and English, and performance instructions such as 'accel.', 'Piu presto', and 'accelerando sino al fine'. The tempo is marked as ♩ = 126. The key signature is one sharp (F#). The score is divided into two systems, with the first system containing the vocal and piano parts, and the second system containing the vocal parts and the piano part.

Presto. ♩ = 208. (They burst frantically upon the scene.)

The musical score is written for a dramatic scene. It begins with a tempo marking of Presto. and a metronome indication of ♩ = 208. The first system shows four vocal staves (Soprano, Alto, Tenor, Bass) with the lyrics "- bath!" and "- ba." The piano accompaniment is marked ff sempre. turbinosamente. and features a rapid, swirling melody. The score continues with three more systems of piano accompaniment, each consisting of a grand staff (treble and bass clef). The music is characterized by fast, repetitive patterns in the right hand and more rhythmic, often syncopated, patterns in the left hand. The final system ends with a double bar line and a key signature change to three flats (B-flat major or D-flat minor).

The musical score is written for piano and consists of six systems of staves. The first system includes the tempo marking Andantino. danzante. and the dynamic marking p leggiere.. The music is in 3/4 time and the key signature has two flats (B-flat major). The score features a variety of musical notations, including eighth and sixteenth notes, rests, and dynamic markings. The second system continues the melody with similar notation. The third system introduces a new melodic line in the right hand, marked p leggiere.. The fourth system features a more complex melodic line in the right hand. The fifth system continues the melody with similar notation. The sixth system concludes the piece with a final chord in the right hand and a sustained bass line in the left hand.

First system of musical notation. The treble staff begins with a forte (f) dynamic and the instruction risolutamente. The bass staff features a piano (pp) dynamic and the instruction ondulando. The system concludes with a forte (f) dynamic and the instruction a tempo.

Musical score for "The Song of the Lark" by George F. Root. The score is written for voice and piano. The key signature is B-flat major (two flats). The tempo is marked "Moderato". The score consists of two systems. The first system has a vocal line and a piano accompaniment. The vocal line begins with the lyrics "The song of the lark" and continues with "The song of the lark". The piano accompaniment features a melody in the right hand and a bass line in the left hand. The second system continues the vocal line with the lyrics "The song of the lark" and "The song of the lark". The piano accompaniment continues with the same melody and bass line. The score ends with a double bar line.

THE DEATH OF FAUST.

SCENE. FAUST'S laboratory as in the first act, but here and there dilapidated by time. Magic voices in the air. FAUST meditates, seated in a large chair. MEFISTOFELE stands behind him like an incubus. Night. A lamp burns dimly. The Holy volume is open as in Act. I.
